Mulching for Winter

It seems as if we've all just finished putting down mulch on our flowers and plants to help them beat the heat of summer down in Georgia. While the temperatures may be cooling, we can't put mulching in the back of our minds. It's time to get ready for the cold months!

Mulching in the winter can provide quite a few advantages for your gardens. Most importantly, mulching can help preserve moisture in the ground instead of allowing it to evaporate. Doing this means less watering for you and more time in your cozy, warm house. Furthermore, it keeps the soil warm during the cold months so that your plants don't freeze and also helps keep down weeds. Mulching also helps keep down mud splashing on the plants which could lead to plant loss due to soil-borne diseases. In addition, it adds color to your garden in an otherwise bland season!

So while mulching seems like something you only do in the spring, it can offer you a great amount of advantage in the winter months to help your plants make it through the cold weather. Don't forget to insulate your garden this winter!

Product Spotlight!: Dyed Hardwood Mulch

The winter months tend to be bland and colorless. Green pine trees offer some color, but for the most part all of the pretty flowers have reached the end of their season. You can, however, spruce up your garden and give it some color! Since you will be mulching for winter anyways, why not use some dyed mulches? They will add color and contrast to your garden and still give it that special beauty that you enjoy throughout the rest of the year.

Our Dyed Hardwood Mulches are made from recycled trees from construction sites. This helps out the environment because it keeps trees from piling up in landfills and instead puts them to better use by giving nutrients to plants and keeping them insulated in the winter. The mulch is created from a variety of hardwoods such as oak and ash woods. None of our mulches contain pine, as the sap in pine does not allow for the dye to penetrate and will instead run out all over your yard!

If you're looking for some beautiful color and a bit of excitement in your garden this winter, consider Dyed Hardwood Mulches! We carry a variety, including black, brown, and red hardwood mulches at the great price of $29.00 per yard. For more information you can stop by or give us a call at 770.424.1479
